

Formation of strategy of food provision of the region as economic security factor of Ukraine

*E.Nikishin, PhD student of Financial and Economic Security Management Department,
«KROK» University
Niki_nik@ua.fm*

Research Methodology: By means of general logical methods the concept of “food security in the region” and the state of food security strategy of the region is analyzed. By means of a systematic approach the state of food safety of the regions is investigated. By means of economic and statistical methods the actual condition of the food security system is assessed.

Results: Development and current state of the definition of “food security of the region” as part of the state economic security is analyzed. The current state and features of food security in the region is assessed. The definition of “food security of the region” as part of the economic security of the state is offered.

Novelty: The definition of the concept of “food security of the region” as a complex interconnected system of production, storage and distribution of food, providing relative economic autonomy of the region and the level of consumption, ensuring the needs of the population is given. Theoretical approaches to the development and implementation of food security strategy in the region are offered.

Practical Significance: As a result of research of food component of economic security theoretical recommendations on the strategy of food security of the region are developed, which should be created and implemented by governmental agencies and academic institutions to improve the food and economic security of the country.