

Prospects of Ukrainian Agroindustrial Complex Development in the Conditions of Informative Economics

P. Rodionov, Postgraduate Student, Department of Finance, Accounting and Auditing National Aviation University

rodionovnau@gmail.com

Research Methodology. The research methods such as deduction, induction, and structural analysis are used when considering the peculiarities of the state exports. In the process of determination of the perspectives of agroindustrial complex, additionally the statistical and generalization methods are applied.

Results. As a result of this study, it was revealed the structure of export of domestic goods, including the portion that is covered by agroindustrial complex production. The prospects of the industry development are considered and it was established that despite the stable financial performance the successful future development of the Ukrainian economy must be based on scientific development and production of hi-tech goods.

Novelty. The novelty of this study is determined by the fact that a detailed analysis of the agricultural sector of Ukraine is conducted and it allows for the first time to consider the prospects of its development in the context of selection of priorities directions with aim to reform the domestic economy.

Practical Significance. Practical significance of this work appears as a result of research of the Ukrainian export structure, world market of agroindustrial products tendencies, and analysis of development prospects of agricultural industry, which is carried out in this work, the suggestions relating to formation of the following development strategy of domestic economy and its separate industries are worked out.