

Features decapitating impact of hostilities on motivationally-semantic sphere of the personality of its members

Doctor O.D. Safin,

A.C. Datskov, associate of the National Bohdan Khmelnytsky

Border Guard Service Academy of Ukraine

245440ss@gmail.com

The research methodology. The author proceeded from the following methodological positions: the state of adaptation of the military personnel who participated in the anti-terrorist operation (ATO), due to the persistence of life expectations and consistency of terminal values, as well as the integration of the extreme sense of experience in system life meanings and values in normal conditions. The preservation of such values as a happy family life, creativity, knowledge, interesting work, integration extreme sense of experience in system life meanings and values in normal conditions determine the state of adaptation in postextreme period.

Results. It is established that the discrediting of humanistic values, temporal decentration personality with extreme invasion in the past postextreme present and future, and the disintegration of the life of meaning, which is characterized by extreme exaggeration of experience, ideas of revenge, universal salvation and the front brotherhood determine the state of maladjustment personality in postextreme period.

The novelty. We investigated the relationship motivationally-semantic sphere and the state of adaptation of the military personnel who participated in the ATO, in playerstealing life conditions. It was ascertained that the state of maladjustment in postextreme period due to the deformation of the motivationally-semantic sphere of the individual, important indicators which are: loss of sense of meaning and moral disintegration, the discrediting of humanistic values, temporal decentration personality with extreme invasion in the past postextreme present and future.

Practical significance. The obtained results can be used in the practice of counseling and psychotherapy for individuals with signs of maladjustment; retraining of servicemen who took part in the ATO, in the process of training for psychologists, law enforcement officers, to develop a course on the psychology playerstealing States.