

Experience of forming of patriotism as to the valued orientation of personality of serviceman in advanced armies of the world countries doctor of psychology, Aleshchenko V. I., Professor of moral and psychological support of the armed forces National defense University of Ukraine named Ivan Chernyakhovsky,

Kamenyuki Y.V., assistant chief of SSES of Ukraine in Vinnytsia region avi1953@ukr.net

Research methodology. An author came from the followings methodological positions: forming of patriotism is examined as the valued orientation of personality of serviceman. The basic method of research is an analysis of the systems of activity of public authorities, military guidance, public organizations, representatives of religious confessions, which directed on forming at the servicemen of armies of foreign countries of patriotic consciousness and willingness to protect interests of the state.

Results. It is set that activity of public authorities, military guidance, public organizations, representatives of religious confessions, in relation to forming of patriotism of servicemen of military powers of front-rank countries of the world carried out through morally-psychological influence on them, that allows them deeper to understand the soldier's duty.

Novelty. Experience of forming of patriotism is investigational as which is directed to the valued orientation of personality of serviceman of armies of front-rank countries of the world on forming for the servicemen of patriotic consciousness and willingness to protect interests of the state and states of members of NATO.

Practical value. The got results of analysis of the systems of forming of patriotism of servicemen at military powers of front-rank countries of the world are examined as a valuable theoretical and applied source, and the exposed forms and methods of forming of patriotism of servicemen can be utilized in practice of work of organs of state power and military administration, public servants, and also at development of modern Conception of national patriotic education of citizens of Ukraine.