

Methodological grounds of the study of modern political systems

*A. Frantsuz, Honored Lawyer of Ukraine, Doctor of Law, Head of the Civil Law Chamber, "KROK" University
baliklu@ua.fm*

Research methodology. Among the scientific and special methods of research, the author relied on the method of system analysis. Necessity of its application is obvious because of the chosen topic for research, that needs for a system approach. With help of the system analysis method the modern political systems were researched.

Research findings. The functioning and development of political systems were studied, and the adequacy and correctness of scientific legal analysis of the complex phenomena, that occur in modern political systems. However, attention was paid to the issue of the political system characteristics of the interaction with the legal, economic and social systems.

Novelty. The holistic concept of the methodological grounds of the modern political systems research was presented with deep consideration of the state and law-making processes in Ukraine.

Practical relevance. The findings may provide a scientific basis for making prognosis and strategies for further democratization and development of the political system of Ukraine. The findings can be used in further broader research and scientific analysis of the peculiarities of the legal support of the democratic development of transitional political systems.