

Limits of state intervention in the country's economic security in the integration period

*O. Shaporenko, PhD in State Administration, Professor, acting Head of Department of International Management and Logistics “KROK»University
forolga@ukr.net*

Research Methodology. Methodological basis of this work are general scientific research techniques and special methods, which are based on modern scientific basis of economic, managerial and related sciences. The following methods are used in the paper: abstract and logic (a generalization of the theoretical foundations of state intervention in the country's economic security); analysis and synthesis (to establish cause-effect causes and patterns of use of the mechanisms of state regulation of the economy), expert evaluation (development of guidelines and the introduction of measures of state economic security assurance and others).

Results. On the basis of the study of domestic and foreign experience the main directions of state intervention in the country's economic security were defined. The strategic concepts of economic transformations in Central and Eastern Europe were analyzed. A definition of the concept of “integration period” was given.

Novelty. The limits of state intervention in the country's economic security in the integration period were investigated.

Practical significance.

The main directions in national economic security assurance were defined.