

Modern Approaches to Formation of Economic Security of the National Construction Enterprises

V. Andrienko, Ph.D., associate professor, University of Economics and Law “KROK” andrienko-vm@ukr.net

Research Methodology. By means of methods of analysis and synthesis, induction and deduction, the new approaches to the structural composition of the system of economic security of domestic enterprises are investigated.

Results. The approaches to the structural composition of the system of economic security of domestic enterprises are concretized. The list of the objects and subjects of construction companies is established. The generalized scheme of the organization of the process of system formation of construction enterprise economic security is offered.

Novelty. Taking into account the activities specifics of the construction companies, the set of functional components of economic security system is offered. The objects and subjects of the system are identified. The methodological approach to the formation of a system of construction enterprises economic security are improved.

Practical Significance. Based on the improved research methodology generalized scheme of the process of formation of the system of economic security construction company is proposed that will promote safety in the industry.