

Methodological aspects of testing laboratories personnel assessment

S.A. Filatov Ph.D., Associate Professor of Department of Economics and Enterprise Management, «KROK» University filatovy@ukr.net

S.Y. Ivanyuta, student of distance learning, «KROK» University» ivanyuta4u@rambler.ru

Research Methodology. Using the methods of analysis and synthesis, terminology method, the assessment methodological aspects of testing laboratories personnel competency were studied, the basic methods for evaluating the quality of employees work, a comprehensive assessment of personnel through the use of point system was offered.

Results. The views of different scientists on the conceptual and terminological apparatus concerning the process of evaluating the testing laboratories personnel competency were analyzed, staff requirements were studied, taking into account the provisions of the National Standard of Ukraine DSTU ISO/IEC 17025:2006, the need to find promising areas of personnel evaluation system of testing laboratories was established.

Novelty. The methodological features of evaluation of testing laboratories personnel competency were formed and a comprehensive assessment of personnel through the use of point system was proposed.

The practical significance. It was emphasized that testing laboratories staff competency is an important element in the overall quality management system of accredited testing laboratories, so its comprehensive assessment, taking into account the professional qualification level, business skills, the complexity of features and results contributes to the competitiveness is recommended for practical use, so as to contribute to the competitiveness of the testing laboratory.